About This Document

This document is intended for use by callers or dance leaders who wish to use the Social Square Dancing lesson system with their new students. It is a product of the CALLERLAB Social Square Dancing Committee, (formerly the CALLERLAB Sustainable Square Dancing committee), which was commissioned in 2016 to define the system, develop, and provide deliverable materials to support it.

Suggestions, comments, or questions regarding this document or its content may be directed to the CALLERLAB Social Square Dancing (SSD) Committee by sending an email to info@callerlab.org.

This, sustainable, Social Square Dancing system is a destination system that has received CALLERLAB Board of Governors approval for distribution. As such, it is not a formal CALLERLAB program as are the Basic, Mainstream, Plus, Advanced, and Challenge programs. Attaining that status rightfully requires a long chain of approvals, culminating in a full vote of the entire CALLERLAB membership. The approved plan will call for a vote at the 2021 convention.

As a lesson destination system, it is offered for people to try and hopefully report back on their experiences with it. That feedback will determine what adjustments might be necessary, what supporting deliverables are needed, and ultimately whether SSD is adopted as a formal program. This means it is important that callers not only try it, but also provide feedback on their experience with it.

The Social Square Dancing Philosophy

This document describes a 50 Call DANCING DESTINATION system and a 12 -14 week teaching order with lesson plans. We see need for the availability and implementation of this Social Square Dance system everywhere. Suffice it to say that we believe a system like this is necessary to reconstruct a solid, vibrant, and sustainable base of core dancers in North America and around the world. This document is concerned with presenting sample material that can be used as a guideline for callers in establishing a minimum level of competency for their new SSD dancers.

Both the need for and the success of the SSD initiative hinge on a single basic fact. Getting New Dancers in real "Dance Mode: much sooner. With the SSD shorter teach time and 2 or 3 classes each year should result in many more prospective dancers and a much higher retention rate each year. "Friends Bring Friends" and "Friends Dance with friends" The SSD system provides a vehicle for teaching more quickly, yet also provides regular dances SSD graduates can attend without learning new calls.

The bulk of the material contained in this document uses Standard Applications (SA). A small number of routines contain gimmicks or a slightly uncommon usage. These have been termed Standard Application with Variety (SAV). Other routines are examples of Extended Application (EA) usage.

In the past, CALLERLAB has published "Standard Application" documents for Mainstream and Plus which were intended to document call usages that could be expected to meet with near universal success. Applications listed are assumed to be those that almost all dancers would dance smoothly. The term "Standard Application" as used in the context of this lesson plan is not restricted solely to uses presented in those earlier documents.

SSD Lesson Plans

“Standard Applications,” in our view, refers to well-presented, smooth flowing, and well-timed, choreography that uses familiar formations and arrangements and has a very high chance of being danced successfully. Dancers taught using this lesson plan will be well exposed and familiar with the applications marked “Standard”.

We view the Standard Applications with Variety (SAV) as stepping stones to Extended Applications and as routines that are easy enough for new dancer success. As such, SAV includes routines that lie outside the collection of tried and true square dance clichés, which have unfortunately become Club Dancing staples.

Extended Applications include practically everything else. A mix of a little EA into a solid SA program can produce a great dancing experience for your dancers and be truly memorable. Too much EA can also be truly memorable, coupled with a bad experience. It is our goal to provide the tools to arm callers to generate many more positive experiences and dancer enthusiasm than current alternatives provide.

For SAV and EA material an effort was made to clearly indicate these departures from SA. In this version of the document, SAV routines appear at the end of patter and singing call sections within each lesson. The EA routines appear at the end of the document. It is hoped that the document as a whole provides a brief view into the kind of calling that has the potential to energize dancers and generate enthusiasm.

Before exploring EA, SSD suggests studying the art of using "choreographic symmetry" first. The SSD Symmetry document will be an available download through the CALLERLAB website.

We do not make the claim that this document comprises the entirety of what is possible or appropriate for an SSD dance. Supplementary materials, including other documents and instructional videos, to be provided at a later date, will begin to fill in the SSD system's total picture with more detail.

However, we believe this document is a good starting place, and that it can be used to jump start a new approach that has the potential to make a positive difference in the activity. Discussion among participating callers is highly encouraged, and this document can serve as a common reference point. As such, we view it as a living document, which is likely to experience many revisions as time progresses.

Only by entertaining and consistently conveying our passion for the activity to our dancers will excitement and enthusiasm for it spread. Enthusiastic and passionate dancers will attract others, and the core base, which can ultimately be sustained, will grow.

Since new dancers may show up the second night, it will be necessary to re-teach these calls on the second dance Lesson along with the two new calls on the Lesson 2 page. Helper commands are included in the modules below. Careful use of helper commands, sometimes even in place of the actual name of the call, is very important for new dancer success.
Call Modules in this Lesson. Note: In each lesson, dancers must be exposed to each of these modules before advancing to the next Lesson. These represent the minimum flows the dancers must know and use the Standard Application of these calls. Each begins with Heads. Repeat them starting with Sides.

Extended Application Modules

The modules presented in this section are considered Extended Application (EA) and as such are beyond the scope of what new dancers are expected to learn during an SSD class. This is workshop material that should be used with care. Like pepper and spice in a dish, a little goes a long way. Too much renders the dish inedible.
